

INVASIVE

Common wall lizard

Podarcis muralis

- I first arrived in BC in the late 1960s when a dozen of us were released from a small zoo on southern Vancouver Island.
- I spread by hitching a ride on vehicles and by people who catch me and release me in new places.
- You can tell me apart from the native Northern alligator lizard by my long, thin body and my green and blue splotches.