

K. Kneidel, iNaturalist.ca

Poison hemlock

Conium maculatum

- I am very toxic to humans, wildlife, and livestock when I am eaten. I can also cause humans to have painful reactions on their skin.
- Originally from Europe, I am now found across Canada and am often found along lake shores, riparian areas, and ditches.
- I am often confused with edible plants because I am a member of the carrot (Apiaceae) family.